Written by people who made the move

Our founder, Alaa Marzouk, moved to Brazil as an Egyptian immigrant in 2014 and learned every step the hard way. This guide is what we wish someone had handed us on day one.

Figures and requirements as publicly listed in October 2026. They change often, and your free roadmap confirms the current figures. This guide is general information, not legal advice.

01

Is Brazil right for you?

Brazil is a continent-sized country. São Paulo is business, Rio is lifestyle, and Florianópolis is where many newcomers settle. International schools and private hospitals are excellent in the large cities.

Portuguese is spoken almost exclusively, and English is rare outside tourist areas. It is the first thing most newcomers underestimate, often from the moment they land at the airport.

Brazil does not sell citizenship. It grants residence to investors and others, and citizenship follows naturalisation after a period of residence.

02

Your visa options

Four ways to live in Brazil legally. Thresholds change, so our Brazil team confirms the current figures in your roadmap.

ROUTE	REQUIREMENT	OUTCOME
Investor visa (business)	Investment of BRL amount in a Brazilian company, or lower with job creation or innovation	Residence; naturalisation after X years
Investor visa (real estate)	Purchase of property worth BRL amount (lower in the North and Northeast)	Residence; naturalisation after X years
Retiree residence	Proof of monthly pension of USD amount	Residence
Digital nomad visa	Remote income of USD amount a month	One-year residence, renewable

04

The documents you'll typically need

Most files start with these:

- [ ] A valid passport
- [ ] Birth certificate, and marriage certificate if your family moves with you
- [ ] Police certificate
- [ ] Proof of your route: the investment, the property, your pension or your remote income
- [ ] Certified translations into Portuguese, with attestation or an apostille

Your free roadmap confirms the exact list for your nationality, family and route.

05

Your first week

What our team does with you after you land:

- [ ] Airport pickup and check-in at your hotel or temporary home
- [ ] A local SIM card
- [ ] CPF registration, your Brazilian tax number
- [ ] Your Polícia Federal appointment
- [ ] Opening a bank account
- [ ] Housing search and tenancy support

06

Choosing your city

Pick your city before your visa.

São Paulo

Brazil's largest city and its business capital.

Rio de Janeiro

Lifestyle: the coastline, the mountains and the city between them.

Florianópolis

An island city in the south, where many newcomers settle.

Your roadmap compares neighbourhoods, schools and costs for your family.
